1. Ending the asylum scam
    a. Summary - Reform UK has a comprehensive plan to fix Britain's broken borders by stopping the boats in the First 100 Days, and then detaining and deporting all illegal migrants and instituting negative net migration. This paper outlines key additional measures to supplement Operation Restoring Justice and Operation Fortress by ending the abuse of our generosity by economic migrants who arrive illegally.

2. The first 100 days our pledges to you
    a. Summary - Each senior minister under a Reform UK Government will have pledged to achieve something tangible and impactful in their First 100 Days in post. If they fail to meet their pledge, they will resign or can expect to be sacked.

3. Stop the Boriswave
    a. Summary - The total lifetime cost of the 2021-2025 migrants expected to receive ILR in the years from 2026 to 2030 is roughly £622.5 bn in real terms if undiscounted, and £154 bn if discounted at the 3.5% rate suggested by the HM Treasury Green Book. This total fiscal black hole represents a £20,000 liability for every household in the UK.

4. Operation fortress
    a. Summary - Britain's borders are broken. A Reform government will deploy the Royal Navy to fix them. No one knows who is reaching our shores. Everyone arriving by small boat has crossed without a passport, without a visa, and without vetting by any authority. Many arrive having deliberately destroyed their documents. This presents a clear and present danger to Britain's citizens and to her national security. Men who came by small boat have been convicted of murder and rape. There are credible reports that Iranian intelligence has used this route to locate operatives in Britain. Smuggling gangs in Calais and Dunkirk should not get to decide who enters this country.

5. Operation restoring justice
    a. Summary - For three decades successive governments have promised to "get tough" on illegal immigration yet the estimated population of people with no lawful right to remain in the United Kingdom now almost certainly stands above 1,000,000. Their continuing presence corrodes the rule of law, costs billions in accommodation and welfare costs, distorts low-wage labour markets, and signals to the world that Britain's borders are open.

6. Mou reform uk rassemblement national
    a. Summary - MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING - PROTOCOLE D'ACCORD - Birmingham, 4 September 2026 Birmingham, le 4 septembre 2026 Nigel Farage, Leader of Reform UK and Jordan Bardella, président du Rassemblement National

7. Keeping criminals behind bars
    a. Summary - Britain is Lawless. Under changes made by Labour and the Tories, when someone is sentenced to prison by a judge, they actually serve only a fraction of their sentence. A Reform UK Government will reverse Burnham's soft on crime changes to ensure that dangerous criminals serve the entirety of their prison sentence. We will deport foreign criminals to serve their sentences abroad, rather than on British soil, and rapidly build Nightingale Prisons to create the necessary prison capacity.

8. Contract with small business
    a. Summary - Small and medium businesses are the lifeblood of the British economy. Together, the United Kingdom's 5.7 million small-to-medium enterprises employ 16.9 million people, provide life to our high streets, deliver much needed services to us all, and – if everything goes well – make money for the entrepreneurs that started them. Britain's small businesses are struggling. Less than a fifth – the lowest share on record – expect to grow over the next 12 months. Almost twice as many expect to shrink, sell up or close altogether.

9. Affordable social housing
    a. Summary - Reform UK will back British workers. Being in work will be a requirement to access new social housing built under this scheme. Social housing should not be a reward for claiming welfare. Reform UK will end access to social housing for foreign nationals, evicting them after a short grace period. A Reform UK government will deliver an additional 50,000 new affordable homes per year. These commitments will make available around 1 million homes for British families.

10. Apprenticeship wage credit
    a. Summary - Reform UK will back British workers. Being in work will be a requirement to access new social housing built under this scheme. Social housing should not be a reward for claiming welfare. Reform UK will end access to social housing for foreign nationals, evicting them after a short grace period. A Reform UK government will deliver an additional 50,000 new affordable homes per year. These commitments will make available around 1 million homes for British families.

11. Making welfare work

a. Summary - The welfare system is not working. Around one-in-ten working-age people in England and Wales are on PIP, the disability benefit. One-in-seven Universal Credit (UC) claimants are not British or Irish citizens.2 The number of children receiving disability benefits has doubled in just 10 years.3 The overall welfare bill, excluding pensions, cost the average family more than £5,600 last year. And Labour is making it worse. By 2031, the bill will reach almost £7,000 per family, per year. A system intended as a safety net has become a way of life, including for foreigners who haven't paid in a penny.

12. Agriculture fishing

a. Summary - Rural and fishing communities were abandoned by a Conservative party that failed to take advantage of Brexit opportunities to secure British waters or recognise farmers as the true stewards of the land. This Labour Government is only worsening their plight. Only Reform UK can be trusted on agriculture and fishing.

13. Planning teal paper

a. Summary - Businesses can't afford to operate, developers are not able to build and as a result residents cannot afford to rent or to buy and are either forced out, or made to pay an extortionate amount on rent leaving them with little to spend. We must unleash the builders and the businesses, boosting brownfield growth whilst protecting the greenbelt. From scrapping biodiversity net gain and the landfill tax to exempting over 90% of high street businesses from business rates and instituting free car parking, making town centres more accessible for residents. However, we recognise with all of these issues that there are many moving parts and interdependencies. That is why these are currently proposals, not yet policies.

14. Election integrity bill

a. Summary - The British people should be rightly proud of our democratic history. From Magna Carta to the Glorious Revolution and the Reform Acts of the 19th century, Britain's electoral system has led the world. However, recent changes to the makeup of Britain now jeopardise our democracy. There are now 13 million immigrants living in Britain, an historically unprecedented change to our country. This brings a series of challenges to our political system. Every Commonwealth citizen living in Britain has the right to vote in our elections. They don't need to become British citizens, live here for a certain amount of time, or express any loyalty to our country. Family voting, in which entire households are coerced or directed to vote in a particular way, is increasingly commonplace, as recently seen in the Gorton and Denton by-election and in the local elections in Birmingham in May. Campaign material is written in languages foreign to the British Isles, designed to appeal to a narrow segment of the electorate - often on sectarian or ethnic grounds. Postal voting can take place without a valid reason, creating an open door for abuse and fraud. We can already see the results, with a litany of convictions for electoral fraud since 2000. On top of this, the dynamics listed above reinforce each other and have led to the election of candidates focused on foreign conflicts and sectarian interests. This is a growing problem at the heart of our democracy. Reform UK stands against these attempts to undermine Britain's political system. We believe in national preference - the principle that Britain should be run in the interests of the British people. We're not ashamed to say this. That's why we're proposing amendments to the Representation of the People Bill - to make sure that British people get to choose our leaders and make our laws. Our democracy has required reforms in the past. Now we need to protect it from a new threat. Britain's political system is broken. Britain needs Reform.
